Cops catch ghost hunters in haunted hospital

Published Monday, March 26th, 2007

The Associated Press

COLFAX, Wash. (AP) - A dozen University of Idaho students who were hunting ghosts in an abandoned hospital at Colfax were surprised by police and now face trespassing charges.

Neighbors who noticed people inside St. Ignatius Manor Hospital early today (just after midnight) called police.

Officers ordered the intruders out and threatened to send in a police dog. The students complied immediately.

The students were investigating a rumor of a haunted insane asylum.

Whitman County Sheriff Brett Myers says deputies have no evidence of a ghost in Colfax but they'll keep their eyes out.
