

Religious Education

We provide Sunday morning classes for children, infant and toddler care during worship services, and we have a great youth group for teens. Along with other area Unitarian Universalist congregations, we offer a special program for ninth graders. It involves study of Native American religion and culminates in a trip to the southwest to meet the people of these traditions.

The educational philosophy of Unitarian Universalists is not to impose doctrines (a word meaning "teachings") upon our children (or each other). Our way is to give ourselves a religious home where we and our children can safely and honestly create a faith, one that grows from reason, experience, and love.
