Mandala Project for annual auction

Atkinson Elementary School
2nd grade Spanish immersion
program

January 2007

Students experienced a complete creative process by drawing their own designs and filling them in with the colors of their choice.

Who needs coloring books anyway?

Second grade students love the hands-on aspect of painting.

In January 2007, Christine worked in a second grade classroom at Atkinson Elementary School to lead the children in creating mandalas on vinyl records, which were destined to be sold at the school's fund raising auction.

The kids were part of Atkinson's Spanish immersion program, where English typically is not spoken during the school day. Although they could understand English, Christine's instructions were translated into Spanish for the children. This made the project especially fun!

Children are so quick to pick up on the mandala concept. A little basic instruction is all they need.
