Fishing Report by Mike Johnson

Clearlake is warming up. We had air temps in the high 80's and water temps up to 62 degrees. The wind blew hard in the days before the tournament keeping the water temp closer to 57 degrees. I got there Friday just as the warm up started. Ran all over the lake trying to figure out a pattern, with little success. But I did see some fish cruising the shallows and a couple locked on beds. So Saturday starts with me at full throttle trying to beat Chuck to a community hole near Redbud. I got there first, and Joe gets one on a dropshot. No fish for me so off to check the flat where we saw the fish before. I got there and found the males had moved up. There were fish everywhere. The fish and beds were so hard to see because of the algae floating in the water. This was good because people moved onto my spot all day long. They would make a few casts and leave. They couldn't even see the fish! You had to get on top of the fish to see them, then move out and make casts to the nest. I caught fish after fish culling up with these bucks. I used a one-two combo to get the stubborn fish to bite. If they swam away, I'd throw a Huddlebug on the nest and leave until they come back. Shake it, & piss them off. Then throw a senko on it or a beaver or one of the ten other rods on my deck. They would jump all over the second lure most of the time. I finished the day with good sized bucks but no kicker.

Water temp had risen up to 62 degrees so I was excited for day two. I ran back to the same area and found that now it wasn't a singles party anymore. The big females had moved in crusing the shallows. I sat on my big fish for probably 30 minutes to get her to bite. I caught alot of fish and saw fish so big that my glasses would fog up. I was sweating everytime a saw the sea-monster. But they were looking for a date, not a meal. Still had people moving into my water all day. They would see me buried in the tulies look and fish right on by. Never caught the C.L. monsters I saw but managed to get the right bites.
